Daniel Stands By His Convictions

Lesson for May 30, 1948

"A picket frozen on duty—
A mother starved for her brood—
Socrates drinking the hemlock—
And Jesus on the rood."

SUCH a picture we have before us in Sunday's lesson. All you need to get this dramatic picture is read the first chapter of Daniel. You will then feel anew the meaning of that cherished statement, "'Tis conviction that convinceth."

• • •

BRAVE TO DO RIGHT

WE GET the first draught of this tonic in verses 8-9, 14-15 and 17. "But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank . . ."

Dr. Newton

He was brave enough to take a stand for what he knew was right. Which reminds me of the story told of Henry Ward Beecher, when yet a small boy. A teacher in the school he attended asked a boy a question which he promptly answered. The teacher appeared displeased, and told the boy to sit down. He asked several other boys the same question, and got the same answer. Finally he asked Beecher, and Beecher gave the same answer, but refused to sit down when the teacher frowned at him. Seeing that Beecher was going to defend the answer, the teacher said, "Boys, you were all correct, but only Beecher was sure enough to stand his ground. I was simply trying to teach you the lesson that you must stand by what you know is right."

• • •

DARE TO STAND ALONE

DANIEL knew that he was taking an unpopular position, but he was willing to be alone so long as he knew he was right. He knew that the consequences would take care of themselves. That is the quality of character which America needs today in her youth.

It is easy enough to be popular, if you run with the gang; but remember this—the gang is always heading downhill. Daniel stood by his convictions when it was costly. In the final windup, he was the head man.

• • •

ENDURING INVESTMENTS

DANIEL, winning his point, made every hour count toward victory. He not only abstained from strong drink, but used his superior strength to serve the king in such way that his talents were sought out and brought into larger fields of opportunity.

Standing by his convictions, he had won over those who at first were disposed to poke fun at him. By superb performance, due to clear thinking and high purpose, Daniel made enduring investments that paid off in big dividends. He did not do right for reward, but because he did right, the reward was inevitable. And so it will be with every young man and woman who purposes in his or her heart to do right.

• • •

GOD'S FAVOR

I WANT you to look carefully at verse 17. "God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom; and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams."

It is impossible to account for Daniel's fortitude apart from his implicit trust in God. Remember the incident of Daniel opening his window toward Jerusalem in prayer?

God never fails those who stake their all on Him. He will not—cannot let them fail. It was because of God's favor that Daniel and his companions proved themselves ten times better than the young men who defiled themselves.

"Who sides with God must always win."

Scoffers Stay On

Even those who scoff at the Bible prefer to live in a culture in which the dominating ideas of the Bible have been influential.

The Bible is a very dangerous book—dangerous to all systems based on greed and prejudice and oppression.

Census Takers in Zoo Have Problems of Multiplication

PHILADELPHIA—Noah marched the animals into the ark two by two —and brought them out the same way. But things are different at the Philadelphia zoo these days.

It's counting time and the harried keepers and attendants have double trouble taking the annual mid-winter count of specimens.

Each time a count is completed, a different total is arrived at, animals and nature being what they are.

Counting noses is all right as far as the hippos, elephants, chimps and the rhinoceroses are concerned. That goes, too, for the tigers, lions, Shetland ponies and the bears.

But the monkeys won't hold still. Since most monkeys look like other monkeys, the adding machines whirl merrily every time a count is attempted.

Some of the prairie dogs are contentedly asleep, but underground. Turtles have dug themselves deep in the rocks of their tank.

By the time it's all over, zoo officials hope to have accounted for some 2,000 guests.

Armless, Legless Veteran Directs Business From Bed

FRAMINGHAM, MASS.—A 32-year-old former GI who lost the use of both arms and legs in France is conducting an export-import business at Cushing Veterans' administration hospital with the help of the Red Cross.

Red Cross Gray Ladies serve as secretaries and researchers for Joseph Press, who once worked in the insurance and finance business in New Haven, Conn.

Although confined to bed or wheel chair, Press has started negotiations to import French perfumes for resh1pment to Latin America and way that his talents were sought out and brought into larger fields of opportunity.

Standing by his convictions, he had won over those who at first were disposed to poke fun at him. By superb performance, due to clear thinking and high purpose, Daniel made enduring investments that paid off in big dividends. He did not do right for reward, but because he did right, the reward was inevitable. And so it will be with every young man and woman who purposes in his or her heart to do right.

Dealer Rewards Finder of Wallet With a New Car

DARLINGTON, S. C.—Marco Wingate has a new automobile and it didn't cost him a penny.

A dealer made Marco the present. The Darlington resident returned a wallet with $35,000 the dealer lost at a car auction here. The car was the reward.

Bank Teller's Terdiness Reveals Embezzled Funds

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Bank Teller Harry C. Delaney wished sincerely that he had not been tardy for work.

If he had been on time, a substitute teller wouldn't have discovered that Delaney had embezzled $14,150 from the Mississippi Valley Trust company where he worked for 26 years.

Delaney admitted the embezzlement to FBI agents who questioned him. He said he began taking funds two years ago to supplement his $205 monthly salary.

Butterflies Flit Across Atlantic

LONDON.—If you happen to see a butterfly flutter by with a license plate attached to its tail, run to the phone and put in a trans-Atlantic call to T. Bainbridge Fletcher in London, England.

He is probably the guy who attached the license.

The licensing scheme is Fletcher's own project. He hopes to learn more about the migratory habits of butterflies.

Up to the last report no Fletcher-licensed butterfly is known to have strayed more than 50 miles but don't discount the possibility of a butterfly flying the Atlantic.

A brightly colored American Monarch was spared in the autumn of 1932.

This ocean flier was promptly caught in England by Sir Beckwith Whitehouse, a great butterfly man, and eventually sold for $41.

Since that time 80 other butterflies have crossed the ocean, all west to east, according to Dr. D. B. Williams, who probably knows more about butterflies than any other man alive.

All Williams' ocean fliers are Monarchs. Williams has discovered they migrate 2,000 miles, spending the winter in Florida and the summer in Canada.

Butterflies have more sense than to get lost, Williams says. In fact, he says, he is amazed at the way butterflies stay on course despite winds, the Monarchs breezing along at a steady 16 miles an hour.

At this top speed a Monarch crosses the ocean on the great circle route in about 5½ days.
